Let say this book is the first phase of a new philosophy, the philosophy of care, it is the first phase because to describe the book is very fair to say, it is a descriptive analysis of the philosophy of care; the caring act, the caring relation, and ethics. I liked the book especially after I read "Caring to know", then, it was clear to me that Noddings provided the basis of a new humanitarian field. The care theory starts with an ideal home and moves outward with a sense of justice.
